Course Description [Fall 2024]

This course introduces students to global Muslim culture and civilization through modern literature and film. Geographic regions include the Middle East, South and Southeast Asia, Africa, North America and Europe. Topics covered include but are not limited to constructions of race, religion, and gender; diaspora and immigration; political Islam and Islamophobia in cultural contexts. Course materials focus on fictional storytelling, although they may be rooted in actual historical events. PATEL M 1:10 – 4:00PM
